

Abstract of the Disclosure

Temperature and precipitation are predicted from temperature and precipitation during the same week in one or two previous years and normal temperature and precipitation during that week. The difference between the previous year's value and the normal value is calculated and 5 used to determine which forecasting formula is used. The result can be prepared in graphical form by time, geography, or both for use in planning advertising, retailer stock purchases, or the like.